London March 6.

THE laſt Mail from Holland, brought the following Account of the Coronation of King Staniſlaus of Poland and Catherine his Conſort, at Warſaw, the 4th of October laſt; which is more particular than any yet publiſh'd here.

THE Senators and Deputies of the Palatinates of Poland having drawn up the Pacta conventa, King Staniſlaus went the Evening before his Coronation to the Church of St. John, to ſwear to obſerve them. His Majeſty went from the Palace of Belinsky, The Coaches of the Palatins and Deputies began the March, and were follow'd by thoſe of the Biſhops and Senators. The King's Coach, in which his Majeſty ſat alone, was preceeded by a certain Number of the Nobility on Horſe-back, and follow'd by the Horſe Life-Guards. The King walk'd through the Church, which was illuminated with Flambeaux, to the high Altar, where was the Archbiſhop of Lemberg in his Pontifical Veſtments, who read to him the Pacta conventa and the Form of the Oath to obſerve them, which his Majeſty on his Knees repeated after him. Which done, he return'd to the ſaid Palace, the Arch-biſhop of Lemberg and the Biſhop of Caminieck ſitting in the foremoſt Seat of his Coach with him.

The next Day, being the 4th of October, their Majeſties went to the Caſtle incognito, having faſted 3 Days to prepare themſelves for the Ceremony of their Coronation and for receiving the Sacrament.

About 10 in the Morning, the Ambaſſadors of Sweden repair'd to the Caſtle. In the Court-yard they found a Battallion under Arms, Drums beating. M. Poninsky, Marſhal of the Courr, receiv'd them at the Foot of the great Stair-caſe, at their alighting from their Coaches. Count Sapieha, Piſſart or high Commiſſioner of Lithuania, waited for them ſome Steps higher, and conducted them to the Guard-Chamber, where M. Poniatowsky Collonel of the Guards met them. At the Door of the King's Antichamber they were complimented on the Part of the King and the Republick by the Caſtellan of Siradia and ſome Deputies. And the great Treaſurer of Lithuania receiving them in the Antichamber, carried them into their Majeſties Cloſet.

The Preparations made in the Cathedral Church of St. John, were as follows.

In the Choir, over againſt the high Altar, on a Floor rais'd even with the ſaid Altar were plac'd 2 Thrones under 2 Canopies. On one ſide of the Choir were Seats for the Swediſh General Officers and others; as there were on the other for the Poliſh Noblemen and Deputies. Between the Thrones and the Altar, 3 Chairs of State were plac'd for the Swediſh Ambaſſadors. And over that Part of the Church is the Window of an Apartment that has a Communication with the Caſtle; from which Window the Kings of Poland uſe to hear Maſs. From that Window, the King of Sweden, accompanied by Count Piper and other Swediſh Lords ſaw the Ceremony of the Coronation. And over againſt it a Gallery was erected for the King's Mother and the Ladies of chief Quality.

The March from the Caſtle to the Church, was begun by the Gentlemen of the Swediſh Ambaſſadors; who were follow'd by the Poliſh Deputies and great Part of the Nobility. After them came the Sword-Bearer of Poſnania with the Sword; the Caſtellan of Rodziec with the Globe; the Caſtellans of Juny and Wladiſtaw with the Scepters; the great General of Lithuania and the Caſtellan of Siradia with the Crowns. Then came the Treaſurer Sapieha, performing the Function of great Marſhal of the Crown. Immediately before the King, walk'd the Swediſh Ambaſſadors Wachſlager and Palmberg.

The King, in compleat Armour, with a Scarlet Robe lin'd with Ermines hanging on his Shoulders, was ſupported by M. Potocky Piſſart or chief Commiſſioner of Poland, and by the Staroſt Sapieha. The Queen, who came next, wore Cloath of Silver, and her Hair hung looſe upon her Shoulders; ſhe was led by Baron Horn, principal Ambaſſador of Sweden; and the Ladies and Officers of the Court clos'd the March.

At their entring into the Church, the Organs and other Muſick play'd; and the Regalia were put into the Hands of Clergymen, who plac'd them on the high Altar, the King's Crown above all the reſt.

Two Biſhops ſtood ready to receive the King at the Foot of his Throne, and led him up to the Altar: The Queen went into the Sacriſty.

The Arch-biſhop of Lemberg was ſeated before the Altar, in his Pontifical Veſtments; to whom the Biſhop of Caminieck ſpoke theſe Words, Our Holy Mother the Church deſires, that this valiant Knight, elected King, may be crown'd. The Arch-biſhop ask'd whether he was worthy to be King, and deſign'd to perform the Duty of that Office. The Biſhop anſwer'd, Yes, he is worthy to be King, and will do his Duty. Then the King's Helmet was taken off, and he kneeling took an Oath conformable to the Pacta conventa, kiſs'd the Arch-biſhop's Ring, and made his Confeſſion of Faith. The Arch-biſhop and the other Clergymen, bareheaded, kneel'd down; and the King proſtrated himſelf with his Arms ſtretch'd out. The Litanies were ſung, and then the Arch-biſhop ſeated himſelf in the Epiſcopal Chair; at the ſame time the King rais'd himſelf up on his Knees. His Robe and Vambraces were taken off. The Arch-biſhop with his right Thumb anointed the Inſide of the King's right Hand, his Elbow, and his Back between his Shoulders, pronouncing theſe Words; I anoint thee for King, in the Name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, Amen. Then he wip'd his Thumb with Crum of Bread and waſh'd his Hands, while a Biſhop wip'd the King with Crum of Bread and Cotton. That done, his Majeſty was led to the Sacriſty where he chang'd his Military Garb for an Epiſcopal Habit all White, which is laid by againſt his Interrment. King John Sobieski was buried in the like Habit which he put on at his Coronation. His Majeſty was led back to the Altar; and the Arch-biſhop preſented him the Sword naked: The King gave it into the Hands of the Sword-bearer, who put it into the Scabbard, and girded it about the King; then drawing it agen, he brandiſh'd it, to ſignify the Uſe to be made of it, and return'd it into the Scabbard. The Arch-biſhop and the other Biſhops put the Crown upon the King's Head,

Head, the Scepter into his Right Hand, and the Globe into his Left. His Majesty ascended his Throne, being conducted to it by the Bishops and the chief Noblemen, the last placing themselves on each side of the Throne. In a little Time, the King was reconducted by 2 Bishops to the Altar, where his Majesty ask'd the Arch-bishop to crown the Queen: The Arch-bishop answering Yes, the 2 Bishops led her up from the Sacristy to the Altar, where she was anointed with much the same Ceremony as the King; She prostrating her self, and having her Hand and Back between the Shoulders anointed, and wip'd. She was led thence to the Sacristy, and a Robe of Cloath of Silver lin'd with Ermine was put upon her Shoulders. The Bishops led her to the Altar agen, put the Crown on her Head, and the Scepter into her Right Hand. Then she was led to her Throne, seven Ladies of the first Quality holding up her Train thither; and afterwards placing themselves about her Throne.

Then Te Deum was sung, and the Cannon of the Castle were Thrice discharg'd. After which, one of the Bishops carried the Gospels to the Thrones to be kiss'd by their Majesties; and then 2 Bishops led them to the Altar there to make their Offerings. They kiss'd the Archbishop's Ring agen, as also some holy Relicks, and then return'd to their Thrones while High Mass was perform'd; which ended, they receiv'd the Communion in both Kinds, for that one Time. The Archbishop pronounc'd his Benediction on their Majesties and the People; and the great Marshal of the Crown proclaim'd long live the King and Queen; which was repeated by the People.

They return'd to the Castle, in the same Order they came.
